

Red Challenge

Change these sentences to the first person (in other words as if you had done what is written). Remember I/we/my/mine.

1. I went to my lesson.
2. I rolled the dice and then moved the counter forwards.
3. I washed my hair twice this week.
4. I planted some pretty flowers and cut the grass around them.
5. I had a yummy midnight feast and made a lot of noise!
6. I ate everything on my plate.
7. I did not know what to do.
8. I put my hat on my head.

Yellow Challenge

Change these sentences to the first person (in other words as if you had done what is written).

1. I had a yummy midnight feast and made a lot of noise!
2. I ate everything on my plate.
3. I did not know what to do.
4. I put my hat on my head.

Change this text so that it is written in the first person – as if you were the person doing all the things written about.

In the evenings, after I had finished my cabbage soup, I always went into the room of my four grandparents to listen to their stories, and then afterwards I said goodnight before I went to bed.

Green Challenge

Change this text so that it is written in the first person – as if you were the person doing all the things written about.

Twice a day, on my way to and from school, I had to walk right past the gates of the factory. And every time I went by, I would begin to walk very, very slowly. I would hold my nose high in the air and take long deep sniffs of the gorgeous chocolatey smells around me.

In the evenings, after I had finished my cabbage soup, I always went into the room of my four grandparents to listen to their stories, and then afterwards I said goodnight before I went to bed.

One evening, when I went in to see my grandparents, I said to them, “is it really true that Wonka’s Chocolate factory is the biggest in the world?”
