

Possible Answers

Red

In conclusion, I feel that dogs should be kept on a lead when in public parks, especially at peak times, as this is much safer for both humans and dogs. Ideally, there should be areas created especially for dogs within all parks.

Yellow

In conclusion, I feel that there are many disadvantages and advantages for dogs being kept on a lead when in public parks. Although it may cause discomfort for the dog, I think there are probably more arguments for dogs being kept on leads, especially at peak times, as this is much safer for both humans and dogs. Ideally, there should be areas created especially for dogs within all parks.

Green

In conclusion, there are many disadvantages and advantages for dogs being kept on a lead when in public parks. Although it may cause discomfort for the dog, on balance safety must be paramount. Injuries sustained to children can not be overlooked. Leads can now extend to quite a distance and can be recalled when necessary. Thinking of the safety implications, it would be wise to answer - yes- dogs should be kept on leads in parks. Ideally, there should be areas created especially for dogs within all parks.