

Wonder

ORDINARY

What sort of 'ordinary' things does August (Auggie) do?

At least 2 from:

Eats ice cream, rides his bike, plays ball and has an Xbox.

What is the name of Auggie's sister? Via

How do you think she feels towards him?

Possible answers:

She feels protective because it says that she gets really annoyed when people do something rude.

She is confident because she is able to stand up for her brother and yell at other kids who are rude.

Why does he see himself as ordinary?

He does all the same things as other children do.

or

He has always been that way so it is normal/ordinary for him.

Start a list to record everything you've learnt about Auggie so far.

He thinks he is ordinary but his family don't.

He does ordinary things like ride his bike and eat ice cream.

He makes other children run away screaming.

He doesn't have a normal face.

His sister stands up for him.

His name is August.

Why does the author have Auggie introduce his name at the end, rather than the beginning, of the first chapter?

Because he feels that his face/ being ordinary is more important.

Because it suggests that his face says more about him than his name.

To show that he feels that his face is the most important/defining feature of him.